

Milwaukee stations WCGV-24 (UPN) and WVTM-28 have been a "duopoly" for two years now, both stations now being owned by Sinclair Broadcasting. WCGV has decided to air the controversial "Stolen Honor" -- as mandated by its Sinclair ownership. This is a classic example of a distant corporation dictating programming in a local market. This practice, combined with Sinclair's huge market share nationwide, creates a blanket of monolithic and one-sided coverage of issues and events. What ever happened to local points of view? And why is WCGV's share of the PUBLIC airwaves being hijacked for this blatantly partisan purpose? Licenses and owners who behave this way seem to think they no longer need to answer to the public. They are WRONG.
